Coal and bricks are cheap in Harlem. So are turnips. They can be had for nothing. At least, that is what the inmates of Nos. 14 and 16 West One-hundred-and-thirty-fifth-st., think, and have thought ever since last Thanksgiving night, when bricks and coal and turnips came smashing through the windows seated at tables at which good people were seated, enjoying turkey and cranberry sauce and snapping wishbones. Some of the pieces of coal and turnip didn't stop at going through one window, but kept on going until they crashed through the windows of the adjoining flat. The colonel is not the only one who has been surprised, and takes a bullet or two in the fourth story and falls tail. As a matter of fact, there is no real trouble in the church."
